- access to adequate resources,
- access to affordable quality services,
- and children's right to participate.

Current trends in ending institutional care

BOSNIA & HERZOGOVINA,
BULGARIA, ESTONIA, GREECE,
HUNGARY, LATVIA, LITHUANIA,
ROMANIA, SERBIA, UKRAINE

Report back from 10 national coordinators

- In several countries the numbers of children in institutions appear to be decreasing & institutions are being closed
- However, rates of family separation & the number of children entering public care is not falling
- Roma children & children with disabilities are still over-represented
- Despite bans on institutionalization of children under 3, it is still general practice in several countries

Children in alternative care - suitability

Provision of Quality & Appropriate Alternative Care

- Kinship care
- Foster care
- Residential care organized around the rights & needs of the child

“the natural way in which family members talk & listen to each other, & particularly parents listen to their children, cannot easily be replicated in more formal living institutions” UNCRC Implementation Handbook

Fundamentally important role of the carer in “developing positive, safe and nurturing relationships with children” (UN Guidelines)

Children in alternative care – after care

- Early planning & preparation involving children directly
- Life-skills & vocational training to support young people's autonomy
- Access to legal, social & health services & appropriate financial support during & after transition
- On-going contact & access to support from former carers

Is everything being done that could be done in my country to prevent children entering public care?

What is the right balance between universal or population-wide services & benefits and more targeted interventions for the most vulnerable?
